

Marvel at Jesus, Live for His Glory

TERRIFIC TRIVIA TIDBITS

The US essentially doubled in size when Thomas Jefferson made the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. Over time, there were more reasons for people to move away from eastern cities to the wide-open West.

Saddle your . . . camels?

Camels roamed the Southwest at one time. Originally brought from Asia and Africa in the 1850s, the US Army used them to help settle the West. They were eventually abandoned and left to roam in the deserts for years.

Giddy-up!

The Pony Express began in 1860 and carried mail between Missouri and California—that's about 2,000 miles! Riders worked in a relay and rode over 75 miles each day by changing horses every 15 miles.

In the short 19 months that the Pony Express was in business, it carried about 35,000 pieces of mail and only lost one bag of mail.

That's a pretty good record!

Would you apply for the job?

Pony Express riders had to be really light so that horses could travel faster. Often, young teens (even as young as 11 years old) were hired.

Why did the Pony Express end after just 19 months?

The transcontinental telegraph line was completed. Now people could send messages that others would immediately receive.

The transcontinental railroad was built by two companies, one working from east to west and the other working from west to east. They met in the middle and completed the rail line by nailing a final golden spike into the railway.

Ta-da!

Building the railroad was dangerous work. Workers had to use dynamite to make tunnels, build high bridges, work in mountains with snow and cold, and bake in the heat of deserts.

What a relief!

The transcontinental railroad allowed the journey west, which took six months by wagon, to take only four days!

Out with the old, in with the new!

There were three main factors that ended the Old West way of life: the telegraph which made communication easier, the transcontinental railroad which made traveling easier, and barbed wire which made less wide-open space to roam and a tamer "Wild West."

Tiny the cougar kitten reminds us that Jesus came to earth as a tiny baby. What a wonder that the Creator of the universe loved us so much that he took on flesh to live in the world he created. He is Immanuel, God with us!

Junior the wolf is still a pup, but he is learning from his dad as he grows. Jesus also grew and learned as he went through childhood. Yet he was also able to teach his teachers because he knew things they didn't. What a wonder to think that Jesus is fully human and fully God at the same time!
