AMERICAN BISON

RED DOG

A baby bison is called a “red dog” because of its orange-red fur. At a few months old, its fur begins to change to dark brown. As bison grow, you can tell a bison’s mood by his tail! If a bison’s tail is hanging down and swinging back and forth easily, usually the bison is calm. But if the bison’s tail is standing up, he’s usually ready to charge! (Either way, stay clear of bison—they are wild animals!)

God created the cow kind on day six of creation. From the cows that were on the ark have come all the different breeds and species of cattle, including the bison.

FUN FACT!

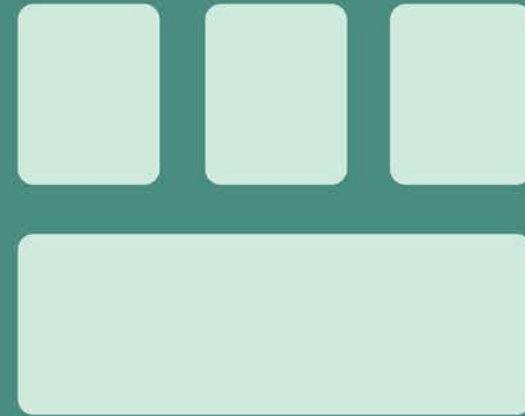

On May 9, 2016, the American bison was declared the national mammal of the United States.

A close-up, sepia-toned photograph of a man with a long, full white beard and mustache. He is wearing a dark cowboy hat with a light-colored band. His hair is long and braided. He is looking slightly to the right of the camera with a serious expression. The background is blurred, showing some foliage.
